MAGKS course Experimental Economics

Part I: September 27-28, 2022 in Marburg

Part II: October 18-20, 2022 in Kassel.

This is the plan: We meet on Tuesday, September 27th and try to make up an experiment. We will definitely not come with an own plan for an experiment. Nothing will be prepared before; we will initiate and moderate your joint creative efforts and possibly give some input if necessary. We'll speak English on that occasion if necessary.

On Wednesday, we discuss details of the experiment and write the instructions (in German, but it is okay if German is a foreign language for some workshop participants). The experiment will be conducted during Part II of the course. Subjects will be first semester students of economics. On the same day, we start analyzing the data; if you have STATA or other statistical software on your laptop, please bring it with you. Immediately afterwards we start writing a paper on the experiment (in English). On the last day (October 20), we will hopefully have a first draft. There is absolutely no guarantee that this will become publishable, but let's try.

You will receive supplementary material (stuff on experimental economics in general) a few weeks before the workshop.

The maximum number of participants is 10; until this number is reached, registration is possible via email to frank@uni-kassel.de and bjoern.vollan@wiwi.uni-marburg.de.
