

Second Kassel Workshop on Folk Economics

Call for Papers

Kassel, October 5th-6th, 2015

We hereby invite papers for the Second Kassel Workshop on Folk Economics. We are pleased to have Andreas Langenohl (<https://www.uni-giessen.de/faculties/zmi/zmi/people/people-zmi/prof-dr-andreas-langenohl>) join us and present the keynote speech entitled

Individualist and praxeological perspectives on lay economic theories

Further key questions touched by Folk Economics, as we call it, are:

- How do the lay theories translate into political preferences?
- What is the role of (policy) communication?
- What are the perspectives for advancing methods to investigate folk economics?
- How do people perceive life's strategic problems if they do not know any game theoretic concepts?

Non-exhaustive list of topics that can be covered during the workshop:

- Papers exploring methods like interviews or concept mapping in the context of folk economics
- Papers on behavioural models that can help to explain the way people think about economics and the economy
- Papers on public choice implications of the way citizens perceive the economics and the economy

The aim of this workshop is to bring together researchers with diverse academic backgrounds, for facilitating future exchange and collaborative research.

Please submit your papers or extended abstracts via email to Ivo Bischoff (bischoff@wirtschaft.uni-kassel.de) and Björn Frank (frank@uni-kassel.de). Any other enquiries concerning the workshop may also be addressed to us directly.

Important deadlines:

Paper submission: August 30, 2015

Confirmation of acceptance: September 4th, 2015

A preliminary version of the program will be sent out to you by September 8th. Scholars who would like to participate without a paper of their own are also welcome, please indicate your interest via e-mail. The core program of the workshop will take place from Monday, October 5th lunch time to Tuesday, October 6th late afternoon. There is no registration or participation fee, and accommodation is free for presenters.
